a doll's house by henrik ibsen characters: torvald helmer ... - by henrik ibsen characters: torvald helmer nora, his wife doctor rank mrs. linde nils krogstad helmer's three young children anne, their nurse a housemaid ... intentions to please us all, and that's the main thing. but it is a good thing that our hard times are over. nora. yes, it is really wonderful. a doll's house - university of california, berkeley - a doll's house in "a doll's house" ibsen returns to the subject so vital to him,--the social lie and duty,--this time as manifesting themselves in the sacred institution of the home and in the position of woman in her gilded cage. nora. is the beloved, adored wife of . torvald helmer. he is an admirable man, rigidly honest, of high torvald. you left. you left me. you walked out this door ... - torvald. easier than staying and trying to tough it out with me--us toughing it out easier than staying and trying to tough it out with me--us toughing it out together--instead you run off and pretend that this is the same thing as being strong. and i look a doll's house act i - weebly - at the end of act i, torvald makes a remark which, to us who know more of his situation than he does, carries tremendous dramatic irony (when the words and/or actions of a character have a different meaning for the audience than they do for the character). smith and kraus play licensing - iun - nora: oh, torvald- this year we really ought to let ourselves go a little bit. it's the first christmas we haven't had to watch our money. helmer: but we still can't go around wasting it, you know. nora: yes, torvald, now we can afford to waste a little bit here and there. isn't that right? just a teeny little bit. now that henrik ibsen, a doll house - edrich - throughout the play, torvald's highest concerns are not only to achieve prestige through his occupation but also to live up to these duties, which he believes are demanded of him. as a result, not only is torvald's intelligence entirely determined by and limited to his ibsen's "a doll's house" as a psychological trust game ... - 2.2 the psychological trust game with guilt aversion in the story, what motivates torvald to play trust may be that he believes nora would feel guilty if she betrayed his trust. therefore a psychological game approach is necessary to model their choices. in such a framework, as a doll's house - tapuz - let us do as you suggest, torvald, and then i shall have time to think what i am most in want of. that is a very sensible plan, isn't it? helmer (smiling). indeed it is--that is to say, if you were helmer really to save out of the money i give you, and then really buy ... a doll's house. henrik ibsen.
